

How It Began

In 1997, Hesther Rippy learned that nearly 29% of Lehi City elementary school children were reading below grade level. Inspired by the notion of helping young people achieve their full potential, Hesther and her husband, Bill, envisioned a center where children and their parents could come for assistance in learning to read.

Today, students, trained teaching staff and volunteers have access to grade level reading materials, and computer stations with educational software in an inviting atmosphere.
